

One summer day Willie Johnson did something he should have left to Santa Claus. Willie tried to go down a chimney. Unlike Santa, however, Willie hadn't planned to leave any gifts. What he had in mind was stealing.

Willie had hoped to use the chimney to get inside a store in his neighborhood so he could rob it. He went down the chimney and ended up inside the store's furnace. It was summer, so the furnace was turned off. Willie couldn't open the furnace door, and he tried to climb back up the chimney again. He got stuck and couldn't go up or down.

Willie yelled for help, and two police officers came along and saved him. They cut a hole in the chimney and pulled Willie out. By this time Willie was covered with ashes and dirt from the inside of the chimney. He was glad to be out of there, but he wasn't glad very long. What do you think the police officers did next?
